6.3.4 Building standards to minimise water use

Karunya Institute of Technology and Sciences is committed to sustainable campus development by integrating water conservation measures in all its infrastructure projects. The university ensures that every renovation and new construction adheres to building standards and practices that minimize water consumption. This includes the implementation of rainwater harvesting systems, low-flow plumbing fixtures, wastewater recycling, and landscape irrigation using treated water. All initiatives align with national standards such as the National Building Code of India (NBC) - Water Efficiency Guidelines, Central Public Health and Environmental Engineering Organisation (CPHEEO) Manual, and Bureau of Indian Standards (BIS) norms to promote responsible water management and long-term sustainability.
